David Restrepo is a commercial litigator who advises businesses on complex disputes, with particular experience involving healthcare institutions and providers. He also advises healthcare clients on transactional and regulatory matters. In addition, David will serve as a registered lobbyist for the firm, leveraging a long career in public service during which he has cultivated deep relationships with lawmakers and key stakeholders across myriad industries in the Albany area.

David brings a strong judicial perspective to his litigation practice, drawing on nearly a decade with the New York State Supreme Court, Appellate Division, Third Judicial Department. As Senior Principal Law Clerk to an Appellate Division Justice, he played a key role in evaluating appeals, analyzing complex legal issues, and drafting appellate decisions and opinions across a broad range of civil, administrative, and criminal matters.

This experience, in addition to other previous roles, gives David a sophisticated understanding of how courts assess legal arguments, identify the issues, determine outcomes, and apply the law to complex disputes. This unique perspective surrounding litigation and appeals, helps clients develop informed legal strategies.
