Laura K. Fallick is a real estate transactional lawyer representing corporate and individual real estate clients in the sale, acquisition, development, and financing of commercial and residential real estate. Laura also represents landlords and tenants in leasing transactions, and private and institutional lenders in commercial financing transactions.

Laura provides practical advice on commercial real estate and economic development. She guides clients through interactions with local industrial development agencies, as well as complex lending transactions and lease negotiations with national retail chains. Laura facilitates successful transactions in niche domains, navigating intricate leasing deals, applying financial acumen in complex lending scenarios, and providing strategic insights into the dynamics of commercial real estate.

Before joining the firm as an associate, Laura established her commitment and dedication to serving clients as a legal intern at Farrell Fritz. Subsequently serving as a summer associate, Laura showcased her intellect and hardworking nature while acquiring the invaluable experience she now applies for the benefit of clients.
