Not-For-Profit Law

We have an uncommon depth of experience assisting not-for-profit organizations, such as private foundations and public charities, in all stages and aspects of their operations. Our ability to counsel the not-for-profit sector is enhanced by our attorneys, who serve as members of the Board of Directors of many not-for-profit organizations, including chairing such organizations.

Our not-for-profit clients include many of the largest and most substantial organizations in this region such as hospitals and healthcare entities, religious organizations and community service entities. In addition to our hands-on experience serving the not-for-profit community as board members, many of our attorneys have prior experience in the business world or hold advanced degrees in business, accounting, tax and urban planning. This allows our unique group of attorneys to service the various needs of not-for-profit organizations such as corporate structure, mergers, joint ventures, compensation matters, employment issues, dissolutions, real estate and tax planning. We have counseled not-for-profits on issues related to excise taxes and to the maintenance of their not-for-profit status, including private inurement and excess benefit transactions.

The team of attorneys who service our not-for-profit clients includes those with experience in corporate law, real estate law, employment issues and tax matters. The breadth of experience in our firm permits us to advise not-for-profit clients on the myriad of issues that may arise in specific transactions or in connection with day-to-day activities. We differentiate ourselves by being creative problem solvers who facilitate transactions. Our team approach to transactions is seamless from our client's perspective.
